HIDDEN AGENDA

On the agenda: Saturday Morning Gallery Tours at Starbucks, 750 N. Franklin St., 312-649-0064, chicagogallervnews.com

Check it out if you ... want to see new gallery works without dealing with opening night crowds, love looking at art but don't have the cash for a weekend museum trip, enjoy learning more about the artists who created the pieces you appreciate.

The deets: Every Saturday from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., you can take a free guided tour of four River North art galleries. A representative from one of the participating galleries leads groups of 10 to 20 people to spaces all located within a few blocks of the starting point. Each gallery features a 20-minute chat about its current exhibition and what it regularly shows—and artists occasionally are present. The tour visits different galleries each week, and since exhibits are constantly changing, even regulars won't have the same experience twice. Reservations are necessary only for large groups.

The payoff: Learning more about Chicago's art scene while saving your money to actually buy some art.

6 COVERSTORY REDEVE I SATURDAY

By Stephanie Lulay I REDEYE

veryone has his vice. For Mark Borkovec, it's salt. "Salty's like my chocolate," the Elmhurst resident, 36, told RedEye. "It's very satisfying."

And he's not alone in his love of the not-so-sweet stuff. Now that we've waved goodbye to a holiday season full of seasoned goodies, a 2009 Consumer Reports study finds that the average American consumes nearly twice the recommended maximum amount of sodium every day. (The report found we also down nearly 460 nutritionally empty calories of added sugar every day, but that's a different story.) And all that seasoning is taking its toll—a recent Rand Corporation study found about one-third of adults have high blood pressure due to excessive sodium intake.

But Americans can't seem to get enough.

"I probably consume too much salt," Borkovec said. "But if my doctor told me I was using too much, it probably wouldn't stop me."

Adding insult to injury: Most of the sodium we consume is lurking where you might not suspect. So overdoing it is not out of the question.

"It's really easy to do," said Hannah El-Amin, a clinical dietitian at the Northwestern Center for Integrative Medicine and Wellness, because a lot of prepackaged foods, snack foods and restaurant cuisine all tend to have more sodium.

Tomato juice, chips, cured meats, frozen dinners, salad dressings and condiments all are sodium-packed culprits, she said.

And while a dash of the salt shaker is tempting, it's not the major addition of sodium in the average American's diet. A recent study estimates that 75 percent of dietary sodium intake comes from processed foods, not salt added during cooking or at the table, according to the Rand Corporation.

Bottom line: Salt is everywhere. Might as well learn a thing or two about it, right?

Salt. It even sets records. According to Guinness World Records, the world's largest salt flat is the Salar de Uyuni in Bolivia (above). At 11,975 feet above sea level, this expansive flat covers 4,600 square miles and contains an estimated 10 billion tons of salt.

sugar or salt?

So why do some people love salt so much while others prefer sweet snacks?

Researchers still don't fully understand that, as they don't know how salty tastes are detected in taste receptors, according to Leslie Stein, a science communications officer at the Monell Chemical Senses Center, an independent non-profit research institute in Philadelphia.

"A complete understanding of that would be helpful if we wanted to help people decrease their salt by finding ways to enhance the taste of foods without so much sodium," she said.

And as for what makes people crave all things salty, the verdict still seems to be out.

"Monell research has shown that people who stick to a lower-sodium diet for a period of time come to prefer lower levels of saltiness in their foods," she said.

But Morton Satin, technical director at the Salt Institute in Alexandria, Va., said people who were denied salt in the womb become lifelong cravers.

"The only formed trait that we know of for people to get an excessive appetite for salt is if they were denied salt in utero. If the mother was told to go on a low-salt diet, the child will have a lifelong increased appetite for salt," he said.

Sodium chloride, or table salt, is formed when the metal sodium reacts with chlorine gas. It is the only type of rock humans normally eat.

Chicago has been home to Morton Salt—made famous by its umbrella girl and the slogan "when it rains, it pours"—since 1848 champions of the world?

It may be hard to believe, but Americans aren't the ones using the most table salt, according to Morton Satin, technical director at the Salt Institute, which follows the salt market.

The countries that consume the most salt are Japan and Switzerland, taking in an average of 10 grams to 12 grams of sodium per day, he said. The groups that consume the least amount of sodium are several tribes in Brazil. American consumers fall somewhere in the middle.

Perhaps more surprising: The majority of salt sold is not used for cooking and sprinkling on foods, but for de-icing roads. The second largest use is water conditioning, and the smallest market is for consumption—only about 5 percent to 6 percent of the volume of salt sold is used for on foods and in cooking.

While Americans may not consume the most table salt, Satin said the U.S. consumes the greatest amount of salt used to de-ice roadways — more than 22 million tons in 2008.

sait caves

Whether you're looking for stress relief, a way to treat colds or respiratory problems, or to improve your skin, salt caves may be the answer, according to supporters of the treatment. The caves are made from bricks of salt and kept to a humidity meant to replicate the seaside. The form of therapy is traditionally most common in Poland, but area salt caves have been attracting a much wider audience. In Chicago, the Galos Caves (pictured above, at 6501 W. Irving Park Road, 773-283-7701) offer an "oasis of peace and relaxation."

types of salt lodized salt contains potassium iodide, a necessary nutrient that help prevent iodine-deficiency, which can lead to Cretinism, a condition which slows the development of a child's brain. Morton Salt developed iodized salt in 1924 to help prevent goiters, which were common at the time, said Morton Salt CEO Mark Roberts.

Sea salt is evaporated from sea water; kosher salt is a larger grain than table salt and is used in making meats kosher, according to the Salt Institute.

the saltiest

Whether generously sprinkled with kosher salt or carefully camouflaged in fast eats, these foods and condiments top the charts of all things salty, according to product Web sites.

EAT/DRINK IT Baked goods and cocktails for Haiti

'Hood: Hyde Park, Lakeview

Did you miss your chance to submit a Haiti donation to Brad Pitt or Jon Stewart, who answered phones during George Clooney's Help Haiti Now telethon on Friday? No biggie. There are still lots of ways to donate locally. Buy cookies, fudge, tarts, cakes and other sweet treats from Luscious Layers Bakery, Bleeding Heart Bakery, Angel Food Bakery, Katherine Anne Confections and sale hosts the Medici on 57th (1327 E. 57th St. 773-667-7394), and your cash will be donated to Doctors Without Borders. Night dwellers, head to the 44th Ward Dinner Party (3542 N. Halsted St.), where guest bartenders will donate their tips for the night to Wyclef Jean's Yele Haiti. When: 2:30-6 p.m. Saturday (bake sale); 5:30 p.m.-3 a.m.

WING IT J-Woww at Rino

'Hood: River North Make way (again) for J-Woww, who (reportedly) is popping up at Rino on Saturday (we hope) after canceling her appearance there last week, causing a domino effect that kicked off cancellations from the rest of the "Jersey Shore" clan. If all goes as planned, Jenni (J-Woww) Farley will emerge from the din of local paparazzi to mingle with cult followers and show off her reality-TV celebrity status. Gauging by last week's buzz surrounding her appearance, we're guessing her fans will forgive her last-minute dropout and will be out in full force on Saturday. Get there early.

Your drink at Vertigo

'Hood: River North

What better way to make peace with winter than by bellying up to an ice bar? The penthouse-level Vertigo (2 W. Erie St. 312-202-6060) debuted its own icy setup last week with 10 feet of stacked ice weighing in at 3,000 pounds. Order a chilled Absolut cocktail or opt for our personal favorite, spiked ice cones ($5). Too much cold for you? Look to one of the roving cocktail carts for a selection of seven new winter warmers ($11-$13), including White Hot Orange Blossom, made with white hot chocolate and Patron Citronge, and Tom and Jerry, steamed milk, brandy, rum and egg whites. Psst: Buckets of snowballs available upon request.

When: 5 p.m.-3 a.m. Saturday; 5 p.m.-10 p.m. Sunday Cash: Prices vary

Belushi Birthday Blowout Weekend

'Hood: Lincoln Park

Attention anyone with a "COLLEGE" shirt and/or toga sheet in the closet: It's time to celebrate the late great John Belushi in honor of the comedian's birthday. Faith & Whiskey (1365 W. Fullerton Ave. 773-248-9119) hosts the two-day party, which concludes Saturday with an "Animal House"-themed, "Otis, My Man!" toga party. Don a toga for a chance to win $100 during the 1 a.m. costume contest and bust a move to the "Shama-lama-ding-dong" tunes of Otis "Otis, my man" Day (10 p.m.), from the movie. Surely, it wouldn't be a Belushi bash without a few drinks. Specials include $5 Jack Daniel's shots and cocktails. Sorry, no Bluto-style chugging allowed.

What we Crave

By Lisa Balde

The versatility of crepes never ceases to amaze us. How can a paper-thin pancake so seamlessly adapt itself from breakfast to dinner, all while maintaining its appeal as a succulent dessert? The secret's in the stuffing, and Crepe Crave, a 3month-old Bucktown creperie serving sweet and savory versions of the European pancake alongside gelato and an extensive coffee selection, has its down to a science.

Brunch is available daily thanks to breakfast crepes undertaking staples that brunch-goers, well, crave. Got a Greek-omelet guy in your group? Get the Greek Egg ($6), made with feta cheese, spinach, tomatoes and eggs. Hankering for the basics? Try the Classic ($5.50), a Crepe Crave favorite that tackles diner-style breakfast with scrambled eggs, cheddar cheese and bacon packed into a hefty savory pocket. (The bacon won't pass anyone's crisp test, but like ham in a casserole, it works.)

The list goes on, from lunchy pizza or turkey-club crepes to the must-try Norwegian ($7.50, left, smoked salmon paired with cream cheese, red onions and capers) and a laundry list of build-your-own, or "create your Crave," options. And though this brunch doesn't come with a cocktail, Crepe Grand Marnier ($4.50), made simply with butter and sugar, comes spiked with a splash of the namesake spirit.

Like its food, Crepe Crave feels versatile. All crepes are made to order behind a glass counter, so the little cafe is as convenient for a late-morning stop-off (to-go crepes are wrapped in foil and packed into a pizza slice-shaped box for safe, warm traveling) as it is comfortable to stick around. If you opt to lounge awhile on the couch or at a table, take time to smell the tea ($1.50-$1.65) provided by Minnesota-based TeaSource. Seriously. It's lined up on the counter for sniffing—and it's heavenly. Breakfast Assam is an obvious choice to pair with the Classic crepe, but we enjoyed the tart herbal Red Berries. Illy drip coffee serves as the house java and is accompanied by lattes and other coffeehouse favorites.

The downside to an all-crepe menu? You're locked into one cuisine, save for a scoop of gelato. But considering make-your-own fillings range from grilled chicken to pepperoni and brie to hummus, consider this place bursting with options.

VIDEO GAME Dark Void Xbox 360, PlayStation 3

Return of the jetpack

By Lou Kesten

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The old-fashioned jetpack doesn't make much sense as a way to get around. Physics, gravity and the limitations of the human physique—not to mention the potential threat of flaming buttocks—all have conspired against the technology, which sci-fi geeks have been craving since the 1920s.

So once again it's up to video games to deliver on dreams deferred. And "Dark Void," with its free-roaming jetpack flight, held particular promise. Alas, the result is far more earthbound than we had hoped.

Will Grey is a cargo pilot who, after an ill-considered detour into the Bermuda Triangle, crash-lands in an alternate universe called the Void. There, a small band of humans are fighting for survival against far more powerful aliens called the Watchers. There's one wild card: inventor Nikola Tesla, who's busy retrofitting Watcher tech for use by the humans.

Tesla's main contribution is the jetpack, which initially gives Will the ability to make vertical leaps like LeBron James. That leads to the niftiest innovation of "Dark Void": its vertical combat, which takes the find-coverthen-shoot style of "Gears of War" into the third dimension.

The jetpack controls are easy to get the hang of, so even flight-sim neophytes will feel comfortable.

Occasionally, "Dark Void" delivers on its premise. The aerial battles are lively, and some of the boss battles are challenging. But it lasts only six to eight hours, and just when it starts to get interesting, it's over.

LOVE IT

Big Love

8 p.m. Sunday, HBO Sissy Spacek (right) joins the already strong cast as a D.C. lobbyist, but she's definitely not part of Bill Henrickson's sisterhood. (Sister/ wife-hood?) "You rub me the wrong way," she tells him as she temporarily blocks the polygamist's senatorial plans. She's not the only worry for Bill or his wives, Nicki, Barb and Margene. In its fourth season, one of TV's most fascinating family dramas only gets better with its swirling mix of social commentary, political intrigue and cultureclash humor. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

Ain't Leavin' Without You

Jaheim's new single is a slick slice of neo soul that stylishly bridges the gap between George Benson and Brand New Heavies, with a groove from the Whatnauts' "Help is on the Way." But it's Jaheim's smooth vocals that really make this a smashin-the-making, especially with the roughed-up remix that features Jadakiss—all of which bodes well for the upcoming "Another Round" album next month.

E typically wears his heart on his sleeve in his music, and his eighth album with the Eels is no exception. The 46-year-old E is consumed by the emotions associated with a failed relationship and growing older on the appropriately named "End Times." So it's not an upper, but more like a catharsis. How to Teach Physics to Your Dog

The promise is enticing—a book that explains quantum physics in a way that's so simple to understand, even a dog can learn it. It's a gimmick, but a cute one. Each chapter starts and ends with a conversation between Emmy, the dog, and Orzel that reduces a scientific concept to bunnies, squirrels and dog treats. This makes the book much more palatable, but by the final few chapters, even the dog's questions were above my head.

Gerard Butler stars in the movie, which takes place in the future when humans control other humans—like that isn't the case now. Except these future people do it in big, multiplayer online games, and they play for keeps. Butler is a modern-day gladiator, forced to fight, and his ultimate goal is to escape from the game and save mankind from the mind-control technology.

RedEye special contributor Sarah Coffey blogs for apartment therapy.com. Visit the site for more tips and tricks about apartment living in Chicago.

Sit down and enjoy the party

Situation: I need extra seating for parties. Solution: Use folding chairs that don't skimp on style.

Winter in Chicago has its drawbacks, but the cozy house parties being thrown this time of year make it bearable. However, if you live in an apartment or condo on the small side, you may not have enough seats for a potluck dinner, a Mardis Gras bash (coming up Feb. 16) or even just a cocktail party on a snowy night.

Folding chairs are one way to go, but too often they're cheap, ugly and hog closet space by refusing to fold flat. Here are a few options that are attractive, all-around good buys.

Bistro chairs

Made of metal and wood, these chairs evoke classic French cafe style—they're good looking enough that you won't have to hide them in the closet. Brightly painted bistro chairs from americancountryhome. com are beautiful but pricey at $200 or $300 per pair. For a similar look on the cheap, try the Tarno folding chair (right) from ikea.com at $15.

Directors chairs

Named for their use on Hollywood sets, these are basic and relatively comfortable folding chairs. They're constructed of a wood frame with canvas seats, and they're available in every possible color. Directorschair. com has a huge selection of quality chairs (left) with prices ranging from $40 to $100. You can find cheaper versions on amazon.com.

Slatted folding chairs

Slightly less glamorous than bistro chairs, wooden slatted chairs have long been a staple on porches and at picnics. They're durable simple and fit in with almost any style. I like Target's beechwood folding chairs (right), which cost $130 for a set of four.

EXTRAORDINARY

Medical drama doesn't measure up

John Crowley (Brendan Fraser) is the father of two children with Pompe disease, a form of muscular dystrophy that brings with it a life expectancy of somewhere around 8 or 9 years. With Dr. Robert Stonehill (Harrison Ford), Crowley starts a foundation in hopes of developing the proper enzyme to extend the lives of his kids and many others.

The buzz: It's about time Fraser ditched the mediocre family adventures ("Inkheart," "Journey to the Center of the Earth"). "Extraordinary Measures" is inspired by a true story, though the Stonehill character actually is a composite of the many scientists Crowley worked with.

The verdict: Overlit as if it takes place in the sky, "Extraordinary Measures" also dials up Stonehill's eccentricity and turns down the disease's real-life terror. The result is big whiffs in the authenticity department. The medical drama works better, as the film presents an inspiring version of the interaction between science and business as medicine develops once the necessary signatures and dollars are in place. Too bad Fraser, who's in way over his head skill-wise, sabotages the movie every time he's on screen. Which is almost

GARRY WILLS

The Newberry Library Bookstore welcomes Garry Wills Wednesday, January 27th, 6pm at the Newberry Library, 60 W. Walton St. In Bomb Power, Garry Wills reveals how the atomic bomb transformed our nation down to its deepest constitutional roots by dramatically increasing the power of the modern presidency and redefining the government as a national security state. A masterful reckoning from one of America's preeminent historians, Bomb Power draws a direct line from the Manhattan Project to the usurpations of George W. Bush. This event is free and open to the public with seating on a first-come basis. The book will be available for sale at the event. For more info: www.semcoop.com or 312-255-3520

Canadian bakin'

CANDY

Canada's candy counters look somewhat different than those in America, says Steve Almond, author of "Candy Freak," a book about the candy industry. He offers a few Canadian faves: Coffee Crisp, a chocolate bar with a coffee cream, chocolate and waferlayered center; Smarties, basically M&Ms in pastel colors and a harder, sweeter shell; and Big Turk-a chocolate bar with a pink jelly center.

Associated Press

Let's face it, Canada may be a close neighbor, but most of us still are pretty clueless about what's going on up there. So with the Olympics about to begin in Vancouver, we reached out to a host of people who could give us a quick primer on the Canadian culinary scene. Here's the cheat sheet of what you need to know.

CULINARY DIVERSITY

Vancouver is a particularly international city, with numerous cultures-and their cuisines-represented. Pick from near endless options for Chinese and Indian fare to more obscure amalgamations such as Aburi-style sushi (seared slivers of seafood infused with French sauces).

POUTINE

This guilty pleasure of extra-crispy french fries. meaty gravy and cheese curds has been called the national dish of Canada. It's a favorite after a late night of drinking.

WINE

We know that the West Coast in the U.S. is great wine territory. British Columbia is no different. While some might think Canada is too cold to produce wine, in cooler climates wineries flourish near temperate water regions, says wine writer Kevin Zraly, who included Canada for the first time this year in his annual "Windows on the World Complete Wine Course."

OYSTERS

The inlets along Vancouver Island are prized for their beautiful oyster beds, which are framed by soaring spruce trees and snowcapped peaks, says Rowan Jacobsen, author of "A Geography of Oysters." "It's just a spectacular area," he says. "It's the last place of native Olympia oysters in the world."

Experts say they may have found the body of Princess Eadgyth, more than 1,000 years after she was carted off to Germany to marry an ambitious Saxon duke. AP

The original Diana

Archaeologists believe they've found body of popular 10th century princess

Associated Press

LONDON She was a beautiful English princess who married one of Europe's most powerful monarchs and dazzled subjects with her charity and charm.

Now an international team of scientists say they think they've found the body of Princess Eadgyth (pronounced Edith)—a 10th-century noblewoman who has been compared to Princess Diana.

"She was a very, very popular person," said Mark Horton, an archaeology professor at Bristol University in western England. "She was sort of the Diana of her day if you like pretty and full of good works."

Horton is one of a team of experts working to verify the identity of some bones found at Magdeburg Cathedral in Germany.

The skeleton was uncovered as part of a wider research project into Magdeburg Cathedral, about 90 miles west of Berlin.

OLDEST ROYAL REMAINS

Should the skeleton be positively identified as belonging to Princess Eadgyth, it would be oldest remains of any English royal discovered so far. Experts say her closest competitors—the bones of various Saxon royals in Winchester Cathedral in southern England—are so hopelessly jumbled together that no single person can be identified.

The elaborate 16th-century monument in which the body was found was long thought to be empty.

When archaeologists opened the monument in 2008, they found a lead coffin bearing her name and carrying a nearly complete set of bones wrapped in silk.

Horton said the skeleton belonged to a woman between 30 years and 40 years of age. But there is some doubt as to whether it is the late royal: Historians believe Eadgyth's body was moved several times—a common practice as far as the bodies of saints and royalty were concerned.

"The inscription [on the coffin] says she's been moved twice previously," Horton said, adding there's archaeological evidence of at least two more moves.

Eadgyth grew up at the dawn of the 10th century, a period during which her half brother King Athelstan extended his rule over all of England and drew on his sisters to cement his influence among foreign rulers.

Eadgyth was destined for Duke Otto of Saxony, a warlord's son who would eventually rise to become the first ruler of the Holy Roman Empire.

Tradition holds that she and her younger sister Adiva were both presented to Otto, who was invited to pick which one he liked best. Eadgyth's looks and charm won out over her sister's youth.

National art scene hits big slump

Associated Press

WASHINGTON The number of U.S. arts organizations grew by thousands over the last decade, but many now are struggling with greater competition for audiences and charity dollars, according to a national study of the industry's health.

The first National Arts Index released Wednesday by the group Americans for the Arts shows the nation's arts businesses fell into their biggest slump in more than a decade in 2008. It looks at 76 indicators, including music royalties, Broadway ticket sales, museum visits, philanthropy and the number of college art majors.

The index registered an overall 4.2 percent decline for the arts sector from 2007 to 2008, though researchers say the problems began brewing much earlier.

Among the key findings:

- The number of nonprofit arts groups grew from 73,000 to 104,000 since 1998—at the rate of one every three hours between 2003 to 2008. Still, one out of three failed to break even on their budgets, even in the best economic years.
- » The arts follow the nation's business cycle and depend on billions of dollars in consumer spending. Researchers predict the arts "may not 'hit bottom' until 2011" when a rebound will begin.
- » Public participation in the arts is increasing on the Internet, at ethnically and culturally specific organizations and at home as people create their own art. Attendance at mainstream arts organizations is in a steady decline.
- » Arts and cultural groups are losing market share of philanthropy to other charitable causes, including international, environmental and disaster relief.
- Demand for arts education is up as more college-bound high school seniors are completing four years of arts and music, and the number of college art degrees conferred annually has grown by 45,000 over the past decade.

How many Ironman Triathlons can one man run in a year?

By Ryan Smith

FOR REDEYE

With apologies to Robert Downey Jr., Sean Stringer is the real Ironman.

The 40-year-old Loop resident gritted out 20 Ironman Triathlons in 2009—unofficially shattering the Guinness World Record of 14 Ironmans completed in a single year—and plans to soon compete in Israel, giving him 21 races over a 12-month period.

"I went for 20 because someone told me that a guy in Belgium was doing 19," Stringer told RedEye. "I didn't want my name in the record books with an asterisk next to it."

The Ironman gets its tough-sounding name for a reason—the triathlon consists of a 2.4-mile swim, 112-mile bike ride and 26.2-mile run, all in one day. That means Stringer's odometer for 2009 looks something like this: 48 miles of swimming, 2,240 miles of cycling and 524 miles of running.

"It was definitely the hardest thing I've ever done in my life," said Stringer, who is using his experiences to jump-start a children's charity called One Good Thought. "There were times I didn't know if I could do it."

Like when he wrecked his bike in Germany and endured scorching temps in China.

"A lot of the Ironman is psychological because you're pushing your body way beyond its limit," said Stringer, an Internet marketer when he's not competing, training or traveling. "It seems like during every race at some point you want to quit. You have to push yourself through that."

Enter a number between 1 and 9 in the empty squares. The clues are the numbers in the white circles that give the sum of the solution numbers: above the line are across clues; below the line are down clues. Thus, a clue of 3 will produce a solution of 2 and 1, and a 5 will produce 4 and 1, or 2 and 3, but, of course, which squares they go in will depend on the solution of a clue in the other direction. No digit can be repeated in a solution. Answer at redeyechicago.com/puzzles.

Now casting male role models for 'Gossip Girl'

"Gossip Girl's" Serena van der Woodsen, subject to a rotating cast of stepfathers and more than a few liaisons of her own, surely could use a strong male role model in her life. Enter Billy Baldwin.

Baldwin is set to play William van der Woodsen, the biological father of Blake Lively's Serena, for a few episodes starting in April. Eonline.com predicts Mr. van der Woodsen blows into town to stir things up with his ex-wife, Lily, who's been a little too blissed-out with her new husband, Rufus.

We're all for the return of Baldwin, arguably the most stable among his famous brothers, to prime time, where we haven't seen him since ABC canceled his short-lived "Dirty Sexy Money" last summer.

Still, Upper East Side society is competitive, and we have to consider other casting options. And, this being "Gossip Girl," any of these suggestions also could serve as Serena's next stepfather. ARIEL ALEXOVICH, REDEYE

Neil Patrick HarrisSure, NPH is a little young to have a college-age daughter, but he and Serena would thrive as the blonder, campier answer to the "Gilmore Girls."

Jack Donaghy
Alec Baldwin's zany "30
Rock" character already lives in Manhattan, so it'd be easy to do a crossover episode.
And if this leads to some kind of throwdown between Blair
Waldorf and Kenneth the Page, so be it.

Quentin Tarantino
"Gossip Girl" is high drama.
So is the manic Tarantino.
We can't really imagine what it'd be like if those worlds collided, but it would probably involve a LOT of blood.

Derek JeterBeautiful, rich Serena always has been the girl who has everything. It would be just like her for her dad to be a superstar New York Yankee.

Ernie Lively
Blake's real-life dad already played her father in both
"Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants" movies. Not that "Gossip Girl" is at all based on reality, but at least they'd have that genetic thing going on.

Bill CosbyColor, schmolor. What
Serena really needs is a Heathcliff Huxtable-style tough love kind of parenting.

Leno stays busy ...

The O has landed The Chin. Oprah Winfrey said Friday that she will air a "one-on-one" interview with past and future "Tonight Show" host Jay Leno (above) on Thursday, according to The Associated Press. Meanwhile, Leno has accepted an offer to keynote the White House Correspondents Dinner in May.

... but what about O'Brien?

Now that Conan O'Brien is ex-host of "The Tonight Show," he's gonna need a new job. Fortunately for Coco, the offers are rolling in. Here's a sampling from the past week:

- » Joel McHale offered to let O'Brien co-host "The Soup."
- » Adam Sandler said he'd put in a good word in Hollywood.
- » Internet video company Revision3 asked Conan to star in its Web shows.
- » FX's "Sons of Anarchy" offered him a guest appearance.

She may be Lancome's new global ambassador, but Julia Roberts (left) says her beauty routine has come to "a screeching halt" thanks to her three kids. "At a certain point in the future, I'll pick it back up again," Roberts told Women's Wear Daily, according to usmagazine.com. Right now, she says her focus is on 5-year-old twins Hazel and Phinnaeus and Henry, 2. Where's a celebrity makeup artist when you need one?

Snooki charity

Nicole "Snooki" Polizzi (right) of "Jersey Shore" is trying to raise money for earthquake relief in Haiti, according to usmagazine.com.

But not by making a club appearance. Instead, she'll be signing autographs at a Pennsylvania car dealership over the weekend. No word on how much it'll cost to score Snooki's scribble.

$21,300

That's how much Mischa Barton allegedly owes her Manhattan landlord in overdue rent and fees for her $7,000-a-month loft, according to a lawsuit filed by the landlord, the New York Daily News reports.
